The University benefits from climbing enrollment, with the largest freshman class in the school's history this fall.

This chilly scene of winter comes from Feb. 3, 1896, with a view of the east side of the Old Capitol. The original photograph is held in Special Collections in the University Libraries' Main Library.

On the cover pages: Some of the most intricate parts of the Old Capitol are the farthest from the ground. Many finely carved wood pieces fit together around a plain wooden core to form the capital of each column that adorns the building's cupola.
