

The University of Iowa is a recognized leader in the nation to value the importance of assisting the spouse/partner of a new faculty or staff in their job search efforts.

“Being from out of state, I did not know which companies would be good to contact, who to call and where to go without doing a lot of exploration. The Dual Career Network helped to quicken the job hunt.”

The DUAL CAREER NETWORK

The University of Iowa’s Dual Career Network, a department within the Office of the Provost, was established in 1994 and is dedicated to assisting the accompanying partner of a new, permanent faculty or staff member in locating and securing employment. Each client is given personalized job-search assistance, depending on his or her unique needs and talents. The Dual Career Network collaborates with departments across campus as well as approximately 400+ area businesses and colleges to find suitable openings. The Dual Career Network does not, however, guarantee employment and if a client does not have work authorization in the United States, assistance may be greatly hampered.
