

Impressions

Honors and Awards

Francois Abboud, professor of internal medicine in the Carver College of Medicine, received the 2004 Distinguished Scientist Award from the American College of Cardiology.

Barrie Anderson, professor of obstetrics and gynecology in the Carver College of Medicine, was named president-elect of the Society of Pelvic Surgeons.

Er-Wei Bai, professor of electrical and computer engineering in the College of Engineering, was elected a fellow of the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers.

Ruth Bentler, professor of speech pathology and audiology in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, received an award from the Retirement Research Foundation for a project on the Outcome of Rehabilitation Training with New-Technology Hearing Aids.

Constance Berman, professor of history in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, won a 2004 Guggenheim Fellowship to support her continued work on a book about women's work in the European economic expansion of 1050–1250.

The John Pappajohn Entrepreneurial Center in the Tippie College of Business was listed among the top 50 entrepreneurial programs and universities in the United States by Entrepreneur magazine.

Robert L. Brennan, professor of educational measurement in the College of Education, received the 2004 American Educational Research Association's ACT E.F. Lindquist Award.

Kevin Campbell, chair of physiology and biophysics and professor of neurology in the Carver College of Medicine, was elected to membership in the National Academy of Sciences.

Kathryn Chaloner, head of biostatistics in the College of Public Health, was elected a fellow in the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Richard Dehn, clinical professor and associate director of the Physician Assistant Program in the Carver College of Medicine, received the Association of Physician Assistant Programs 2003 Research Achievement Award.

David Forkenbrock, director of the UI Public Policy Center, received the National Academy of Science's first William S. Vickrey Award for the best paper in transportation economics and finance.

Gerald Gebhart, professor of pharmacology in the College of Pharmacy, received the 2004 Purdue Pharma Prize for Pain Research.

E. Peter Greenberg, professor of molecular pathogenesis and microbiology in the Carver College of Medicine, was elected to membership in the National Academy of Sciences.

Donald A. Gurnett, professor of physics in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, was elected a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

Keela Herr, professor of nursing in the College of Nursing, was named a fellow of the American Academy of Nursing.

William LaRue Jones, director of the University of Iowa Symphony and head of orchestral studies in the School of Music in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, was elected to the executive board of the American String Teachers Association.

Steven Levy, professor of preventive and community dentistry in the College of Dentistry, received the H. Trendly Dean Memorial Award for meritorious work in epidemiology from the International Association for Dental Research.

Leonard MacGillivray, assistant professor of chemistry in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, received the 2004 Inter-American Photochemical Society's Young Investigator Award.

George P. Malanson, professor of geography in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, was elected a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Allyn Mark, professor of internal medicine in the Carver College of Medicine, received the 2004 Irvine Page–Alva Bradley Lifetime Achievement Award from the American Heart Association Council for High Blood Pressure Research.

Mac Marshall, professor of anthropology in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, received, along with his coauthors, the 2003 book prize from the journal Addiction for the book Alcohol Policy in Developing Societies: A Public Health Approach (2002).

Françoise Martinet, emeritus faculty member of the dance department in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, received a Lifetime Achievement Award from Corps de Ballet International, the global professional organization of ballet teachers in higher education.

Ann Marie McCarthy, associate professor of nursing in the College of Nursing, was named a fellow of the American Academy of Nursing.

Kathleen McKeen, administrative director of the Iowa Cancer Registry, received a Lifetime Achievement Award for contributions to the Surveillance, Epidemiology, and End Results Program of the National Cancer Institute.

Paula Michaels, associate professor of history in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, received the Heldt Prize of the Association of Women in Slavic Studies for her book, Curative Powers: Medicine and Empire in Stalin's Central Asia (University of Pittsburgh Press, 2003). The book also garnered Michaels finalist honors in the 2004 PEN Center USA Award competition.

Jennifer Niebyl, professor and head of obstetrics and gynecology in the Carver College of Medicine, was named a physician who changed the face of medicine by the National Institutes of Health.

Tonya Peeples, associate professor of chemical and biochemical engineering in the College of Engineering, received the Lloyd N. Ferguson Young Scientist Award from the National Organization for the Professional Advancement of Black Chemists and Chemical Engineers.

Lawrence D. Prybil, professor of health management and policy in the College of Public Health, received the Walter J. McNerney Fellowship from the Health Research and Educational Trust, an American Hospital Association affiliate.

Hillary Sale, professor of law in the College of Law, was coauthor of one of the 10 best articles published in 2003, judged by a poll of corporate and securities law teachers. The article, "Securities fraud as corporate governance: Reflection upon federalism," was published in the April 2003 issue of Vanderbilt Law Review.

John Beldon Scott, professor of art and art history in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, received the Charles Rufus Morey Book Award from the College Art Association for his book, Architecture for the Shroud: Relic and Ritual in Turin (University of Chicago Press, 2003).

Charles S. Shipan, professor of political science in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, won three awards from the American Political Science Association for his book, Deliberate Discretion? The Institutional Foundations of Bureaucratic Autonomy (Cambridge University Press, 2002). Shipan won the Gregory Luebbert Award, the Richard Fenno Prize, and the William Riker Award.

Christopher Squier, associate dean for dental research and environmental health in the College of Dentistry, received the International Association for Dental Research Distinguished Service Award.

Mark Stinski, professor of microbiology in the Carver College of Medicine, was named Iowa's Inventor of the Year by the Iowa Intellectual Property Law Association for discovering the CMV promoter used in developing therapeutic drugs.

Department of Dance students from the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences performed a piece entitled "Diplomacy" at the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C., during the biennial festival of the American College Dance Festival Association this past June.

Cole Swensen, Iowa Writers' Workshop faculty member, won the 2004 PEN Center USA Award for her translation, from French into English, of Jean Fremon's Island of the Dead (Green Integer, 2003).

James A. Van Allen, professor emeritus of physics in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, received the 2004 National Space Grant Distinguished Service Award of the National Space Grant Foundation.

Thomas A. Weingeist, professor and head of ophthalmology in the Carver College of Medicine, received a Life Achievement Award from the American Academy of Ophthalmology.

Robert Yager, professor of science teaching in the College of Education, won the Distinguished Contribution to Science Education Through Research Award of the National Association of Research in Science Teaching.

Timothy Yahr, assistant professor of microbiology in the Carver College of Medicine, received the Merck Irving S. Sigal Memorial Award from the American Society for Microbiology and the American Academy of Microbiology.