

Impressions

Honors and Awards

Rick Altman, professor of cinema and comparative literature in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, received the Limina Award for his book Silent Film Sound.

Kathleen Buckwalter, professor in the College of Nursing, received the Distinguished Achievement Award at The University of Iowa's Annual Celebration of Excellence and Achievement Among Women.

Barry Carter, professor in the College of Pharmacy, and Elizabeth Chrischilles, professor of epidemiology in the College of Public Health, won the American Pharmacists Association 2005 Wiederholdt Prize for best published paper in the economic, social, and administrative sciences.

K.B. Chandran, professor of biomedical engineering in the College of Engineering, was elected a fellow of the Biomedical Engineering Society.

Russell Ciochon, professor of anthropology in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, with a joint appointment in the Department of Pediatric Dentistry in the College of Dentistry, was named a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

University of Iowa Press was honored for publishing
Walt Whitman and the Earth: A Study in Ecopolitics
by M. Jimmie Killingsworth, selected by Choice magazine
as an Outstanding Academic Title.

Patricia Clinton, clinical associate professor in the College of Nursing, received the Loretta C. Ford Distinguished Fellow Award from the National Association of Pediatric Nurse Associates and Practitioners.

Kennith Culp, associate professor in the College of Nursing, was named a fellow of the American Academy of Nursing.

Jay Currie and Karen Farris, clinical professor and associate professor, respectively, in the College of Pharmacy, were noted for best manuscript in the American Journal of Pharmaceutical Education for the year 2004. Currie also won the American Pharmacists Association Community Pharmacy Residency Excellence in Precepting Award.

Anne DiPardo, professor of curriculum and instruction in the College of Education, was elected a fellow of the National Conference on Research in Language and Literacy.

Joann Eland, associate professor in the College of Nursing, received the Jean Guyvean Excellence in Nursing Education Award from the Association for Pain Management Nursing.

R. William Field, associate professor of occupational and environmental health in the College of Public Health, received the U.S. EPA/NEHA Individual Achievement Award for Excellence in Radon Risk Reduction.

Gerald Gebhart, professor of pharmacology in the Carver College of Medicine, received the 2005 Janssen Award in Gastroenterology from the American Gastroenterological Association.

Vicki Grassian, professor of chemistry in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, with a joint appointment in the department of chemical and biochemical engineering in the College of Engineering, was named a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Donald Gurnett, professor of physics and astronomy in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, was awarded the Hannes Alfvén Medal by the European Geosciences Union for his contributions to solar-terrestrial and planetary-solar system sciences.

Sarah Hanley, professor of history in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, won the Edwin Surrency Prize by the American Society for Legal History for her article, "The Jurisprudence of the Arrêts: Marital Union, Civil Society, and State Formation in France, 1550–1650," in Law and History Review.

Keela Herr, professor of adult and gerontological nursing in the College of Nursing, received the Elizabeth Narcessian Award from the American Pain Society for outstanding educational achievements in pain management.

Bradley Hindman, professor of anesthesia in the Carver College of Medicine, received the 2005 Leonard Tow Humanism in Medicine Award from the Arnold P. Gold Foundation.

George Lawry, clinical professor of internal medicine in the Carver College of Medicine, received a 2005 Laureate Award from the American College of Physicians.

Hosin David Lee, associate professor of civil and environmental engineering in the College of Engineering and transportation researcher in the UI Public Policy Center, received the Road Engineering Excellence Award from the Korean Society of Road Engineers.

Jim Jung-Ching Lin, professor of biological sciences in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, was named a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

William Ming Liu, assistant professor of counseling psychology in the College of Education, received a Researcher of the Year Award from the American Psychology Association.

Teresa Mangum, associate professor of English in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, won an award from the Humane Society of the United States for her course on Literature and Society: Capturing Animals.

Christopher Merrill, professor in the International Writing Program, received the 2005 Kostas Kyriazis Award, Greece's most prestigious journalism award.

William Miller, professor of clinical and administrative pharmacy in the College of Pharmacy, received the Paul F. Parker Medal for Distinguished Service to the Profession of Pharmacy.

Jeff Murray, professor of pediatrics in the Carver College of Medicine, was elected to membership in the Institute of Medicine of the National Academies.

Tonya Peeples, associate professor of chemical and biochemical engineering in the College of Engineering, received the 2005 Distinguished Service Award from the American Institute of Chemical Engineers Minority Affairs Committee.

Tarrell Portman, associate professor of counseling and human development in the College of Education, received the American Counseling Association's Counselors for Social Justice division's first-ever Mary Smith Arnold Anti-Oppression Award.

Johnmarshall Reeve, professor of educational psychology in the College of Education, received the 2005 Thomas N. Urban Research Award.

Marilynne Robinson, Iowa Writers' Workshop professor of creative writing in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, won the 2005 Pulitzer Prize in fiction for Gilead: A Novel.

Val Sheffield, professor of pediatrics in the Carver College of Medicine, was elected to membership in the Institute of Medicine of the National Academies.

Bernard Sherman, radio producer in broadcasting services, received a 2004 Association for Recorded Sound Collections Award for Excellence, in the category of Best Research in Recorded Classical Music, for the book he coedited, Performing Brahms: Early Evidence of Performing Style.

David Soll, professor of biological sciences in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, was named a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Christopher Squier, associate dean for research and graduate studies in the College of Dentistry, was awarded the American Cancer Society's Lifetime Award of Excellence.

Keith Stroyan, professor of mathematics in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, received the Deborah and Franklin Tepper Haimo Award for Distinguished College or University Teaching of Mathematics, the Mathematical Association of America's most prestigious teaching award.

Edward Thompson, clinical professor of anesthesia in the Carver College of Medicine, was named a fellow of the American Academy of Nursing.

The Department of Mathematics in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences was recognized by the American Mathematical Society Committee on the Profession for bringing more underrepresented minorities into the field of mathematics in 2005. In May 2005, the department received a 2004 Presidential Award for Excellence in Science, Mathematics and Engineering Mentoring from the National Science Foundation.

James Van Allen, professor emeritus of physics and astronomy in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, was awarded the 2006 National Air and Space Museum Trophy for Lifetime Achievement.

Peter Veng-Pedersen, professor in the College of Pharmacy, was elected fellow of the American Association of Pharmaceutical Sciences.

Elizabeth Whitt, professor of counselor education in the College of Education, was inducted into the Iowa Academy of Education.

Chun-Fang Wu, professor of biological sciences in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, was named a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.