Bob Jackson, MSW
Bob is a Clinical Associate Professor in the School of Social Work. He is also the Coordinator of the School's Distance Education Program. He worked in community mental health for 23 years. Bob teaches in the following areas: family centered practice, social work practice with individuals, families, and groups, interventions with individuals, object relations in social work practice and seminar for students in advanced practicum.

Anne Wiser, Ph.D.
After obtaining her PhD. in Neuroscience from the University of Colorado, Anne worked at the Salk Institute as a research associate with a study of the primary visual cortex of macaques. She later joined Dr. Nancy Andreasen's Mental Health Clinical Research Center at the University of Iowa as a postdoctoral fellow to study brain imaging of learning & memory in healthy human subjects and in schizophrenic patients. Anne is currently pursuing a Masters of Social Work at the University of Iowa with the goal of becoming a psychotherapist. She plans on integrating her neuroscience expertise with her psychotherapy practice to better serve her clients.

WORKSHOP DESCRIPTION

Goal:

To increase social workers knowledge of the inter-relationship of the neurosciences and interpersonal relationships in the here and now.

Objectives:

- To understand how the growth and organization of the brain is a function of the interaction of genetic and environmental influences.
- To understand that the mind is real.
- To understand that empathic relationships or attunement is at the heart of creating change and from the perspective of the neurosciences, why this is so.
- To acquire some basic knowledge of neuroscience
- To learn, based on what we know from the neurosciences, how to change your practice and be more effective in your work.
